Between Us

Had you been around the local USO building the past week end and seen the young people playing ping-pong, just sitting around making conversation over the happenings of their set, and the piano going again that any effort we as a community put forth to secure this building as a permanent gathering for the young people of our community would be too much for us to put forth to keep it. Different mothers are going to be there when the building is open and already it is proving a popular place. The Woman's Club very graciously offered their building to them, but with the gas situation as it is, it's a little easier for them to drop in close to town, however they are keeping that in reserve for sometime in the future.
—By the way, the announcement in last week's paper concerning a certain wedding in town to be held in the high school soon, has everyone guessing, and we are sure when all the news comes out about it, you will be right there to witness it. Almost every organization in town has been given credit for the wedding, but just keep your eyes on the younger set and see if they are not behind the affair. You don't want to miss it when it comes off, so watch the paper for other announcements.
When Leodel Coleman told a colonel he was led in the Pacific to tell the folks at home the Red Cross was sending them everything they wanted (except his in his company who had been wanting some chewing tobacco) he said, "You Leodel or you Leodel?" Anyhow, recently in the presence of one of the country's most noted women, and one that Georgia is proud to claim as her own, the colonel told Leodel's story. Recently these six young men have received money for chewing tobacco to last for months with a note saying she had been worried ever since she heard about their longings and hoped they would enjoy the gift, and the note was signed by the author of Gone With the Wind, Margaret Mitchell.
Whether it was Brown Wool or Pile Twist, we are sure it chewed a little more than talking. W. J. E. Turner

Tillman Awarded Bronze Star Medal

With the 102nd Infantry Division in Germany—Award of the Bronze Star medal (Oak Leaf Cluster) has been made by Sgt. Jack B. Tillman, 407th regiment, squad leader, from Register, Ga., for heroic achievement against the enemy in Germany. The 407th is a unit of the 102nd (Ozark) Division commanded by Brig. Gen. Frank A. Keating. Serving as a scout for his organization in an attack against the enemy, Sgt. Tillman was the first of his company to venture into the unknown dangers of each house in the village in search of the enemy. His courageous actions carried out with calm deliberation, the presence of extremely heavy enemy fire was instrumental in the capture of ten German prisoners. The fact that several casualties sustained testified to the risk taken by Sgt. Tillman in his action against the enemy that won him the admiration and respect of the other members of his company. Previous to this before leaving the States, Sgt. Tillman had been given a badge as expert infantryman. Sgt. Tillman, who is 20 years old, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Tillman, of Rt. 1, Register, Ga.

Absence of "Hope" Cause of Elation

Because the message received here did not contain the word "hope," friends here of the Leroy Cowart family were greatly enthused for a full twenty-four hours within the week. The brief message, phoned to friends here by authority of Mrs. Leroy Cowart, was concerning the believed release of her son, Leroy Jr., from Japanese hands in the recent breaking down of the prison camp at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. By a misunderstanding the message was given "Leroy Cowart is safe." The message was explained to have come from an associate of his, a prisoner with him for the past three years. Friends in Statesboro were jubilant to be sure. And then came the correction—the message had originally read, "Hope Leroy Cowart is safe, and the first word had been lost in the transmission. This what was believed to have been an assurance—and a joyous message to friends—leaves the situation as it was before, one of hope.

Friends Who Like Us

EDITH, OF COURSE, cannot continue in business and remain entirely happy in her home lives on kind words alone, but in so far as these kind words are made substantial by the accompaniment of small scraps of paper bearing the 8-mark, kind words do give inspiration.

Within the present week there has come to this editor a brief message:

"Brownwood, Texas,
January 31, 1945.

"Bulloch Times,
Statesboro, Ga.
"Enclosed is the price of a year's subscription to your paper, and may be more (there was firmly attached by adhesive tape $2 in currency); but two dollars isn't too much to me. Forget about the change."

"Thank you."

And two days before it had come from a city in California a letter reading like this:

"Find her with check for four years' subscription to your good paper. I just can't be happy without the Times."

Then in almost the same mail was a message from Oceana, Ga.:

"Herewith is renewal of my subscription for the coming year. I first subscribed for the Times in 1906 and have been reading it ever since."

Forty years is a long while for a friend to stick with us. If you were to do some calculating, you would discover that this friend has paid us in these forty years approximately $60, and all that in addition to his words of appreciation.

A friend in Atlanta writes that he was mortified to observe that his subscription had run somewhat in arrears, and he sent a check to pay for four years:

"Perhaps you should get out a small list occasionally of people like myself who forget and fall behind. . . I was truly mortified when I noticed that my subscription expired some time ago."

Who Killed Somebody?

WE HAVE ABOUT abandoned hope of ever so regulating all matters which come under our observation, that we shall not be able occasionally to find fault with things we see here and there.

Indeed, about the time we make a boast that seems to promise a cure for the most conspicuous ills, another breaks loose at another point which is worse than the first. Some weeks ago we inaugurated, at the request of some unknown reader, a campaign against the desecration of the sidewalks by reckless and indiscriminate spitting. The next day when we walked down town we again found things looking a little better, and we were beginning right to flatter ourselves as a great sanitary success for our community. Had we stopped somebody from spitting on the sidewalks?

But hardly had we turned the corner when they met our gaze, right in the front door of one of the most delicate places of business in the city—the most offensive sight we had seen—a broken vessel of what was evidently a bottle of tomato catsup. (Our housekeeper tells us that these bottles now call for thirty good points from the ration book.) And there was the bloody looking puddle smeared for a foot or two right in front of a lady's office door. Somebody had walked past, had let the bottle slip, and had walked right away leaving the spectacle to give offense to all who walked that way. The lady inside told us she had been horrified at the spectacle—and wondered who would have been so thoughtless as to leave the sidewalk so desecrated. Not worse than a tobacco puddle, to be sure—but almost as bad.

And the next day we walked down another street along which somebody had apparently come direct from the dental office, for right there in front of a business house were great bloody spicicles. It was a distressing spectacle.

And as we talked about the matter, the lady told us there was another indecent habit which needed a proof—and strong proof. She recognized that it was a matter which could not elegantly be referred to in a family newspaper—but she said one of the habits which give most offense is that of people with bad colds leaving visible evidences of neglect to use

GOVERNOR POINTS STATE'S PROGRAM

Outlines Sixteen Most Important Measures Now Before Law-Making Body

Determined upon the greatest possible progress for Georgia during his administration, Governor Ellis Arnall has transmitted to the state legislature an impressive 16-point legislative program outlining the measures he considers as being among the most urgent and important.

The governor has dealt with these suggestions in general in his address to the General Assembly when it convened week before last. In his more concise outline, he has called for the passage of the following bills, some of which have now been enacted:

1. Teacher retirement system.
2. Drawing of $2,485,000 from the state treasury to pay the teachers a two-months bonus.
3. Expansion of veterans' service office program to be administered by a constitutional board of veterans.
4. Exemption of veterans from tuition and admitting them to schools regardless of age.
5. Validation of contracts entered into by veterans who are minors.
6. Construction of war memorial building on Capitol Square as a memorial to Georgia's war heroes, to cost approximately $1,000,000. Another measure to create a veterans' war memorial building commission.
7. Creation of state loan authority to lend money to returned servicemen.
8. Creation of authorities to finance public works, public improvements and business expansion.
9. A series of bills dealing with judicial procedure.
10. Legislation to enable development of state's ports, Brunswick and Savannah.
11. Public health service expansion on both levels, state and local.
12. Legislation to provide benefits for state peace officers, with one phase planned to provide jobs for returning veterans.
13. Abolition of the poll tax as a prerequisite for voting. A thorough evaluation by the legislature of this matter has been recommended by Governor Arnall.
14. A biennial system of registration. Pressure for the passage of such a bill regardless of legislative action on poll tax has been promised by Governor Arnall.
15. Submission of a new state constitution to replace that of 1877. Establishment of a constitutional convention and the extension of initiative and referendum home-rule powers to cities and counties are provisions included in the proposed new basic law.
16. Legislation to assist veterans' children as to education.

When we have said that much about a person in public life with whom we are in disagreement, we pause for the applause of that multitude greater or smaller—who happen to think as we do upon the particular matters at issue.

If while waiting, we take time to analyze the words as compared with simple leadership, we will find ourselves surprised at the similarity of their meaning. Leadership is a quality possessed only by those of strong wills and strong capabilities. The measure of one's leadership is exactly the extent of one's capacity to impress his convictions upon others. However fine may be a man's capacity to think, unless he leads others, his thinking will be of little effect. Carried to extreme, however, leadership becomes dictatorship, and a dictator is often such an one as will find himself set at naught by those whom he seeks to placate with least pressure.

And we have said this much to lay a foundation for a sort of commendation of the present titular head of our own government—who seems to know what he wants done, and seems willing to use such force as is available to bring these things to pass.

Some twelve to sixteen years ago we had as governmental head a man who was not a dictator; if he knew what was needed to be done, he was visibly lacking in the determination to bring these conditions to pass. A happy change came about when this diplomat—the man who looked for better conditions "just around the corner"—was dethroned overboard and there came in his place a man who had well-defined ideas and the capacity to bring things to pass. Between Herbert Hoover, the diplomat, and Franklin Roosevelt, the leader, there was a vast ocean of difference. Franklin Roosevelt and his friends resent the title of dictator as applied to him—but it has come to fit him like a glove. If men in position to administer affairs are not acceptable to him, he does not hesitate from enforcing his will by cutting those who are lacking in ability or willingness to please him. Would any man capable of leadership act differently? We think not. When a leader cannot secure co-operation by mere invitation, there are two courses open—either surrender his point, or enforce co-operation.

And we are not intending to give too high endorsement to the present dictator or those of his kind. Strong men are necessary to the going forward of important matters, and in a democracy it is sometimes a bitter to thwart a capable leader in a matter which of itself is right, rather than surrender leadership to an extreme which eventually destroys democracy. We are thankful for the capacity of Franklin Roosevelt to see and strive for the accomplishment of so many things which are essential; we are happier still for the capacity of those others in lesser authority who stand up against him and declare, "Thus far shalt thou go, and no further."

The limited qualities of dictatorship are not wholly objectionable.

THE DOG ON THE HAYSTACK

This is a free country, but you can't use butter substitutes without paying a penalty or going to jail. Oleo-margarine and plain margarine are both as good substitutes for cow-butter as a pink calico dress is for a brown calico dress, but our Uncle Sam has permitted a law to be put on the law books of the nation that butter substitutes can't be used unless—

The "unless" in this case is: If you put coloring in the said substitutes and use the said substitutes, at a hotel or a hospital or a children's home or a poorhouse, you are a butter manufacturer and must pay a license of $600 per year, plus 10c a pound for the butter substitute as an extra tax. You can't buy cow-butter on the market, because there ain't any.
And you can't use butter substitutes
... because Uncle Sam says—DON'T.

The coloring that we put in margarine is the same coloring that every packer and cow-butter producer puts in their butter to make it yellow. If they did not use coloring in cow-butter, that butter would be white like uncolored margarine. Of all the unjust, crazy, crooked laws we ever heard of is this law that puts a tariff
on substitutes as in the case of butter.
But there are more cow-butter folks
than margarine folks, and the money is on the cow.

The packers and lobbyists have what it takes to keep this law on the statute books. This "what it takes,"
so we have heard, is little printed pieces of paper that you can buy things with in stores and can also exchange these little pieces of paper (with alien cords running through them) for almost anything anybody has to sell. Surely common sense did not allow such a "shame" to become law of the land.

HOW TO LIVE ON $10 A WEEK

- 1—Rent a four-room house and give a bad check for first four months.
- 2—At end of four months move
and rent a five-room house on credit.
- 3—Eat one meal a day with a friend (if any).
- 4—Wear your old clothes: if they are too old, turn them around.
- 5—Walk to work, if you work.
- 6—If you don't work, get on welfare later.
- 7—Stop smoking.
- 8—Drink water instead of soft drinks.
- 9—Stay away from church so the preacher won't expect you to donate.
- 10—Buy what you can on credit
from your neighborhood grocer.
- 11—If your neighborhood grocer
cuts you off, hunt another neighborhood grocer.
- 12—Repeat this process from week
to week till grocers give out.
- 13—Wear shoes only when you go rabbit hunting.
- 14—When you bathe (if you do bathe), use the creek and no soap.
- 15—Don't pay any taxes at all of any kind.
- 16—If you need a doctor, call one
and promise to pay him later.
- 17—If you need a doctor later on,
call a new one.
- 18—Don't subscribe to a newspaper; read the signs of the stars for entertainment and information.
- 19—If your bed falls down, fall
with it and sleep on the floor.
- 20—Don't write any letters. Send word.
- 21—If you break your specks, never mind. It won't do you any good to see things.
- 22—As to the movies, take an occasional look at the advertisements at front of theatre and then use your imagination.
- 23—Don't chew gum or eat candy or shoot craps. These things cost money.
- 24—Don't worry. Ten dollars a week ain't worth it.
- 25—But if you should worry, use
five of your dollars for a fifth-size
bottle of $1 on liquor on Tuesday.
- 26—And use the remaining five dollars for another bottle of whiskey to be used to drown out your troubles
from Saturday till Monday.
- 27—Then start all over again.

ON THE LOOSE

A wild varmint of unknown origin is doing a right smart of damage to chickens, poultry, ducks and geese,
in and around flat rock. He sneaks upon them in the dark and cuts their throats and leaves them dead before morning. Treps have been set for him, but he throws the said traps by switching his tail against the trigger,
and he never gets ketchesd himself.

Mrs. slim chance sr. lost three nice hens and two roosters and a couple of geese last Friday night, her husband set up all night with his shotgun, leaning against the chicken house, but he went to sleep and did not wake up till the fowls were gasping for breath.

He is not fit for a night watchman,
no mrs. chance says.

The policeman thinks he is a weasel.
Dr. hubbert green says he got signs that it was a skunk. Mr. art square an experienced trapper, claims that it is either a mink or a musk-rat, or possibly a racking-coon. a reward
has been offered for his body, dead or alive. he makes tracks that look like a furrin animal, not common to flat rock.

mrs. bert skinner has rote the wildlife administration at washington, and has asked for aid, also a few chickens and ducks to take the place of her many losses. she has had so much trouble trying to make ends meet, she now says there ain't nothing in nothing. she went into the dairy business, but her cow died and broke that up.

The Great Pasteur

Never Saw Chile's Nitrate Desert, But...

His bacterial research, which gave him the name to the pasteurization process, provided the basis for one of the widely accepted explanations of Chilean Nitrate's origin.

Vast beds of Natural Nitrate
In Chile's desert region are natural deposits—enough to last hundreds of years—one of the oldest and best known fertilizer materials. Mystery of their origin long has challenged science.
Many theories have developed.

Some say prehistoric plants were "nitrified" by bacteria in the soil. That's what Pasteur's work suggested. Others say they are decayed vegetation.

There is a belief the nitrate beds are droppings of billions of birds. Another, that electricity formed them through centuries of violent storms. Some think the beds are rotted rocks; some think they are a crust pushed up from underneath.

Perhaps the right theory com-bles parts of all of them. Who knows? But there is one point

on which all agree:

Chilean Nitrate of Soda
was created by tremendous natural processes. It is completely natural... the only natural nitrate in the world.

Because of its natural origin,
Chilean Nitrate of Soda contains, in addition to nitrogen and sodium, small amounts of boron, iodine, manganese, copper, 24 elements in all—many of which are essential to healthy plant growth.

Yes, a hundred years of research and experience agree on the importance of Chilean Nitrate's natural qualities and their outstanding performance
in continued profitable farming.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving memory of our dear husband and father, the late HENRY N. COLLINS,
who departed this life one year ago
today, February 5th, 1944.
One sad year since you have left us,
You whom we loved so dear.
Oh, how can we help feeling lonely
When your voice we do not hear.
A day are passing, and the good and kind
A better father you could not find;
Upright and faithful in all his ways,
Good and kind to the end of his days.
From this world of grief and sorrow
To the land of peace and rest,
God has taken you, dear husband,
Where there is everlasting rest.
You are gone but not forgotten.
Never will your memory fade;
Loving thoughts will ever linger
Around the grave where you are laid.

Between Us

Recently a group of young wives of men of our town and community have gone into service, met and decided to organize a social club. At the first meeting at the USO they had thirty-four wives present. Many of them hoped would come did not get to the first meeting, however girls from as far as Regier came, and the group has made so many plans that sound interesting that on Tuesday, Feb. 13th, they are going to have another meeting at eight o'clock. They hope to contact many of the wives before that time, but if you do not get in touch with some of this group, meet them at the USO on that night and hear some of the plans. If you want more information about it, call Bobby Smith Gates, as she is one of the organizers of the group. -Bel.

The oyster supper given by the Statesboro Volunteers Friday night was a decided success; several boxes were raffled off, one of which brought $3.

O. C. Alderman requests us to say that the negro employed here, about which the carpenters we so much brought up, was no foreigner but simply a carpenter.

Dublin County Dispatch: "It is intended by some parties to establish another newspaper in Statesboro. It will be published in the morning and will be a competitor of the paper in Statesboro.
